

Daniel S.
Race and Ethnic Relations [SOC 31] QUIZ
Bronx Community College, CUNY
Prof. Remi Alapo
Fall 2018

Ethnocentrism is the evaluation of different cultures involving standards of each culture. Not only that it involves the values of each person's culture such as beliefs and values. Ethnocentrism has to do a lot with people thinking their culture is better than someone else's. Some examples that involve social distance and ethnocentrism in my community is when someone who has more money or is living way better thinks because of that their culture is better.

Race is a group of people in which they distinguish each other based on their culture or from where they come from. Ethnic groups differ from race because an ethnic group is a community that share similar cultural background or descent. They could have some similarities, but no race or ethnic group would consider each other alike. They might think their culture or race is better because they might see things bigger than what they are.

Ethnicity is from where you culture is from or where your family comes from. Social class has to do on how people separate each-other based on their economic status. Ethnicity and social class are both different because not everybody considers social class about being important because it separates people because they might think because they have a stronger social class then they do.

Racial profiling is bad because it has to do with other people's race or their cultural background. It has to do with someone discriminating someone and even though that person isn't too clear the other person sees it. People feel offended when this happens because it could be verbal or nonverbal actions. For example, there was a time in my life when I came from Dominican Republic, I didn't know English, so some people didn't like me because of that.

Middleman minorities is a minority population who occupations that have to do with money or even with traders. Not only that , Middleman minorities have to do with suffering from discrimination, so they feel discriminated. This is a term which separates two different types of people between majority middleman and minority and it means that both have a different social class from others.

The factors that have to do with functional and conflict perspectives approach to intergroup conflicts because if they're very big conflicts it would be something had for people to function and t make it work. Especially if those people do not get along with each other. They could feel very bad about it because of the way people would act around them.

The relationship between cultures, reality and intergroup relations is that they both have to do within culture or even ethnicity. It could be religion, race or even the music they like or listen to. It could be because of the fact that cultures have so many different things. But sometimes they have many things in common too.